Hallowell granite was used to build many great buildings and monuments around our country. Our stone was prized for its purity, relative ease of carving and its light color. Washington Roebling, son of the architect designer of the Brooklyn Bridge praised Hallowell stone, "the granite was very fine, very durable, the whitest granite known".

The largest contract was for the New York State Capitol in Albany for 25 million dollars from 1867-98.

THE QUARRY

Our name is linked to Hallowell's granite quarries of the past and the artisans of that time—the movers, shakers and hard rock breakers. that mined, sculpted and shipped from the wharves in Hallowell to the shores of many seas. -

Cold beer and the rivers of Maine have a long entwined history. One of our intrepid Maine souls from the 19th century, Leonard Burlington Smith began his maritime adventures as a cabin boy at 14.

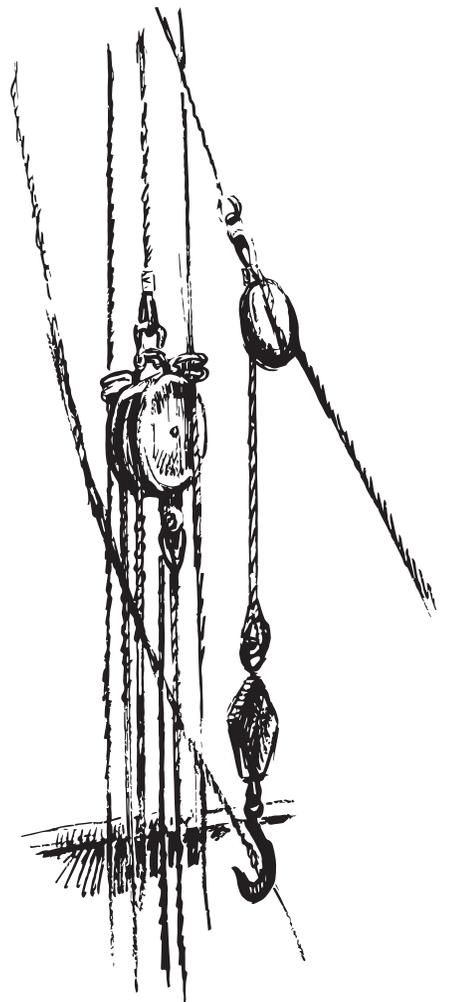

By 23 he owned his own schooner and he began hauling ice and timber from along the Kennebec and Penobscot rivers to Curacao in the Carribean.

At first the islanders didn't really warm to the ice, (sorry about that). But when Smith began selling chilled beer his ice business took off. He became very rich and eventually became US Consul to Curacao.
